Lylah, with her short brown hair, freckles, maskara on her eye lashes, and red blush on her cheeks, walked confidently into her 9th-grade math class. She loved math and was exceptionally good at it. Today was test day, and Lylah was ready. She quickly breezed through most of the questions, her pencil flying across the paper.

But then, she stopped. There was one question that stumped her. It wasn't algebra or geometry, but something else entirely. Lylah stared at the problem, her brow furrowed in concentration it was the last question.

She took a deep breath and started working through the problem step by step. After a few minutes of intense focus, the answer came to her! She scribbled it down, a triumphant smile on her face. When the tests were graded, Lylah received a perfect score: 100/100!

To celebrate her success, Lylah went to her favorite gaming place. AKA home. She settled in to play Zelda: Breath of the Wild, exploring the vast world and battling monsters. It was the perfect way to end a perfect day!
